THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY

LABORATORY OF ORGANIC CHEMISTRY

REPORT OF EXPERIMENT

1. TITLE OF EXPERIMENT: The synthesis and isolation of the compound, 2,4-dinitrophenol.

2. OBJECT OF EXPERIMENT: The purpose of this experiment was to synthesize 2,4-dinitrophenol from phenol and nitric acid, and to isolate it as a pure solid.

3. THEORY OF EXPERIMENT: The reaction of phenol with nitric acid is an electrophilic aromatic substitution. The phenol ring is activated towards electrophilic attack by the presence of the hydroxyl group. Nitration of phenol with concentrated nitric acid and concentrated sulfuric acid yields 2,4-dinitrophenol as the major product.

4. REACTION EQUATION: c1ccccc1O + O=N+O + OS(=O)(=O)O → O=N+c1cc(O)ccc1N+[O-] + OS(=O)(=O)O

5. REAGENTS AND EQUIPMENT:

Phenol, Nitric acid, Sulfuric acid, Sodium hydroxide, Water, Ice, Filter paper, Boiling chips, Round-bottom flask, Reflux condenser, Mechanical stirrer, Thermometer, Separatory funnel, Drying tube, Vacuum flask, Vacuum pump.

6. PROCEDURE:

1. Preparation of 2,4-dinitrophenol: A solution of 10 g of phenol in 100 ml of water was added to a solution of 10 ml of concentrated nitric acid and 10 ml of concentrated sulfuric acid in a 250 ml round-bottom flask. The mixture was stirred and heated to 50°C for 1 hour. The mixture was then poured into ice water and the solid was collected by filtration.

2. Purification: The crude product was washed with water and then with 5% sodium hydroxide solution. The solid was then washed with water and dried in a vacuum flask.

3. Recrystallization: The dried solid was recrystallized from water. The crystals were collected by filtration and dried in a vacuum flask.

4. Characterization: The melting point of the pure compound was determined to be 110-112°C.

5. Yield: The yield of pure 2,4-dinitrophenol was 4.5 g (45%).

6. Analysis: The elemental analysis of the pure compound gave the following results: C, 43.4%; H, 2.5%; N, 14.1%. The calculated values for C₆H₃N₂O₅ are: C, 43.4%; H, 2.5%; N, 14.1%.

7. Conclusion: The synthesis and isolation of 2,4-dinitrophenol was successful. The pure compound was obtained in a 45% yield.

8. References: 1. March, J. Organic Chemistry, 6th ed., Wiley, New York, 1980. 2. Vogel, V. I. Practical Organic Chemistry, 5th ed., ELBS, London, 1978.

9. Appendix: The infrared spectrum of the pure compound is shown in the appendix.

10. Notes: The reaction was carried out in a fume hood. The pure compound was stored in a dark bottle.

11. Signatures: The report was prepared by [Name] and [Name].

12. Date: The experiment was performed on [Date].

EXPERIMENTAL PROCEDURE

APPARATUS AND MATERIALS

1.1.1. General Description of Apparatus

1.1.2. Description of Materials

The first part of the experiment was devoted to the study of the effect of the concentration of the solution on the rate of the reaction. The results are given in Table I.

A series of experiments were carried out in which the concentration of the solution was varied while the temperature was kept constant. The results are given in Table II.

Also in this part of the experiment the effect of the concentration of the solution on the rate of the reaction was studied. The results are given in Table III. The effect of the concentration of the solution on the rate of the reaction was also studied. The results are given in Table IV.

In the second part of the experiment the effect of the concentration of the solution on the rate of the reaction was studied. The results are given in Table V.

It is to be noted that the rate of the reaction increases with the concentration of the solution. This is in agreement with the theory of the reaction.

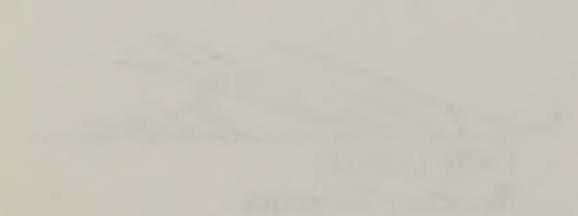

The rate of the reaction is also affected by the concentration of the solution.

Concentration of solution	Rate of reaction
0.1 M	0.01
0.2 M	0.02
0.3 M	0.03
0.4 M	0.04
0.5 M	0.05

It is to be noted that the rate of the reaction increases with the concentration of the solution. This is in agreement with the theory of the reaction.

The rate of the reaction is also affected by the concentration of the solution.

It is to be noted that the rate of the reaction increases with the concentration of the solution.

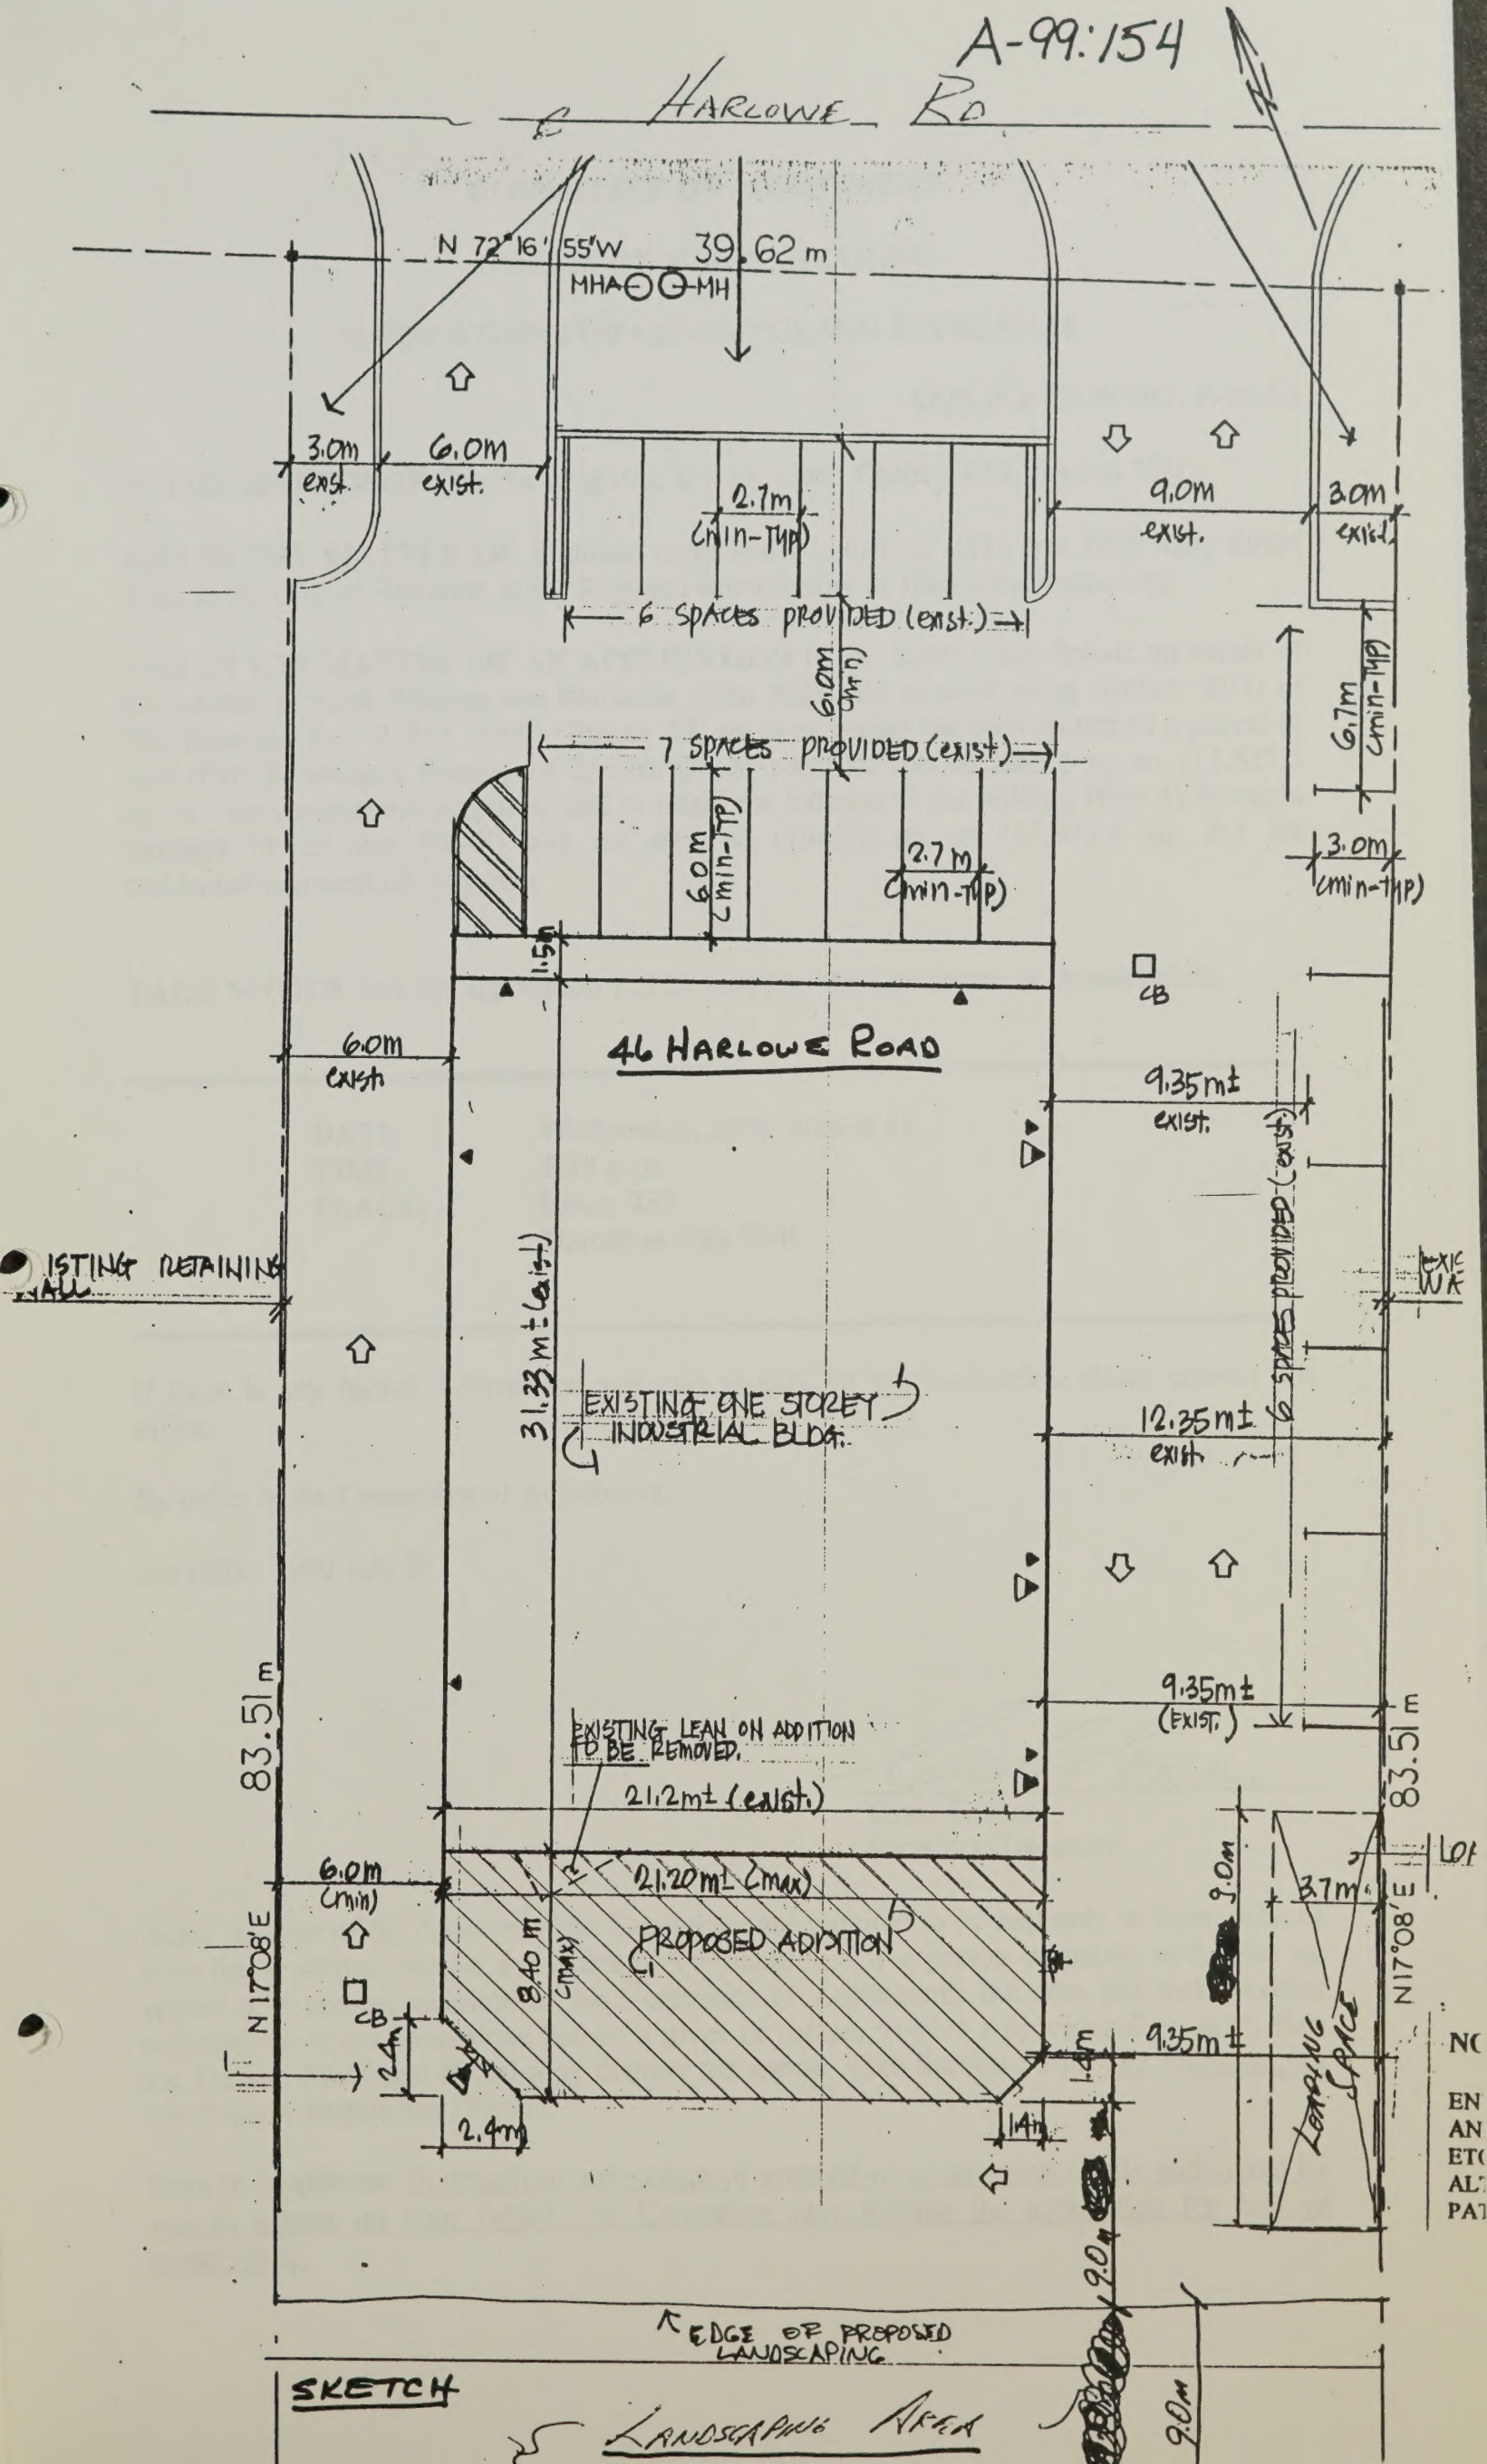

It is to be noted that the rate of the reaction increases with the concentration of the solution. This is in agreement with the theory of the reaction.

EXPERIMENTAL INVESTIGATION

OF THE EFFECT OF TEMPERATURE

ON THE RATE OF REACTION

BY J. H. HARRIS

DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, BERKELEY, CALIF.

RECEIVED JANUARY 15, 1934

ABSTRACT: The effect of temperature on the rate of reaction of hydrogen peroxide with ferrous sulfate in the presence of ceric sulfate as a catalyst has been studied. The rate of reaction was measured by the method of observing the change in optical density of the solution. The results show that the rate of reaction increases with increasing temperature, and that the activation energy of the reaction is 14.5 kcal/mole.

Submitted for publication in the JOURNAL OF AMERICAN CHEMICAL SOCIETY

The reaction of 1,2-dichloroethane with sodium metal in the presence of a small amount of 1,2-dichloroethane-d₂ has been studied. The reaction is first order in sodium and first order in 1,2-dichloroethane. The rate of reaction is independent of the concentration of the deuterium compound. The reaction is believed to be a concerted process involving a transition state in which the sodium atom is partially bonded to both carbon atoms of the 1,2-dichloroethane molecule.

ON THE RATE OF REACTION

INTRODUCTION AND OBJECTS

The object of this experiment is to determine the effect of temperature on the rate of reaction between potassium chlorate and hydrochloric acid.

It is well known that the rate of reaction increases with an increase in temperature. This is due to the fact that the molecules of the reacting substances have more energy and are therefore more likely to collide with sufficient energy to overcome the activation energy barrier.

In this experiment, the rate of reaction is measured by the volume of gas evolved per unit time. The gas evolved is oxygen, which is collected over water in a graduated gas jar. The volume of gas evolved is measured at different temperatures and the rate of reaction is calculated from the volume of gas evolved per unit time.

The results of the experiment are shown in the following table.

Temperature (°C)	Volume of gas evolved (cm ³)	Time taken (sec)	Rate of reaction (cm ³ /sec)
20	10	120	0.083
30	15	80	0.188
40	20	60	0.333
50	30	40	0.750

From the above table, it is clear that the rate of reaction increases with an increase in temperature. This is due to the fact that the molecules of the reacting substances have more energy and are therefore more likely to collide with sufficient energy to overcome the activation energy barrier.

Graph of Volume of gas evolved vs. Time

From the graph, it is clear that the rate of reaction increases with an increase in temperature. This is due to the fact that the molecules of the reacting substances have more energy and are therefore more likely to collide with sufficient energy to overcome the activation energy barrier.

EXPERIMENT 10

THE EFFECT OF TEMPERATURE ON THE RATE OF A CHEMICAL REACTION

OBJECTIVE

To determine the effect of temperature on the rate of a chemical reaction.

The reaction between potassium persulfate and potassium iodide is used as a model reaction.

The reaction is: $2\text{K}_2\text{S}_2\text{O}_8 + 2\text{KI} \rightarrow 2\text{K}_2\text{SO}_4 + 2\text{K}_2\text{S}_2\text{O}_3 + 2\text{I}_2$

The rate of reaction is determined by measuring the time taken for a fixed amount of iodine to be produced. The iodine is then reacted with a fixed amount of sodium thiosulfate, which decolorizes the solution. The time taken for the solution to become colorless is a measure of the rate of reaction.

The effect of temperature on the rate of reaction is studied by carrying out the reaction at different temperatures.

Temperature (°C)	Time taken for color change (s)
20	120
30	60
40	30
50	15

From the table, it can be seen that the rate of reaction increases with increasing temperature.

This is because the molecules have more kinetic energy at higher temperatures, so they are more likely to collide with sufficient energy to overcome the activation energy barrier.

The activation energy for this reaction is approximately 50 kJ/mol.

The Arrhenius equation can be used to calculate the activation energy.

The Arrhenius equation is: $k = Ae^{-E_a/RT}$ where k is the rate constant, A is the pre-exponential factor, E_a is the activation energy, R is the gas constant, and T is the absolute temperature. By plotting $\ln k$ against $1/T$, a straight line is obtained, from which E_a can be determined.

The results of this experiment show that the rate of reaction increases with increasing temperature, which is consistent with the Arrhenius equation.

EXPERIMENTAL PROCEDURE

1. Preparation of the sample

1.1. Preparation of the sample

1.1.1. Preparation of the sample

The first step in the experiment is the preparation of the sample. This is done by weighing a certain amount of the substance to be studied and placing it in a container.

The second step is the preparation of the solution. This is done by adding a certain amount of solvent to the container and stirring the mixture.

The third step is the preparation of the standard solution. This is done by adding a certain amount of a substance of known concentration to a container and stirring the mixture.

The fourth step is the preparation of the test solution. This is done by adding a certain amount of the sample to a container and stirring the mixture.

The fifth step is the preparation of the blank solution. This is done by adding a certain amount of solvent to a container and stirring the mixture.

The sixth step is the preparation of the calibration curve. This is done by plotting the absorbance of the standard solutions against their concentration.

1.2. Preparation of the standard solution

The seventh step is the preparation of the calibration curve. This is done by plotting the absorbance of the standard solutions against their concentration.

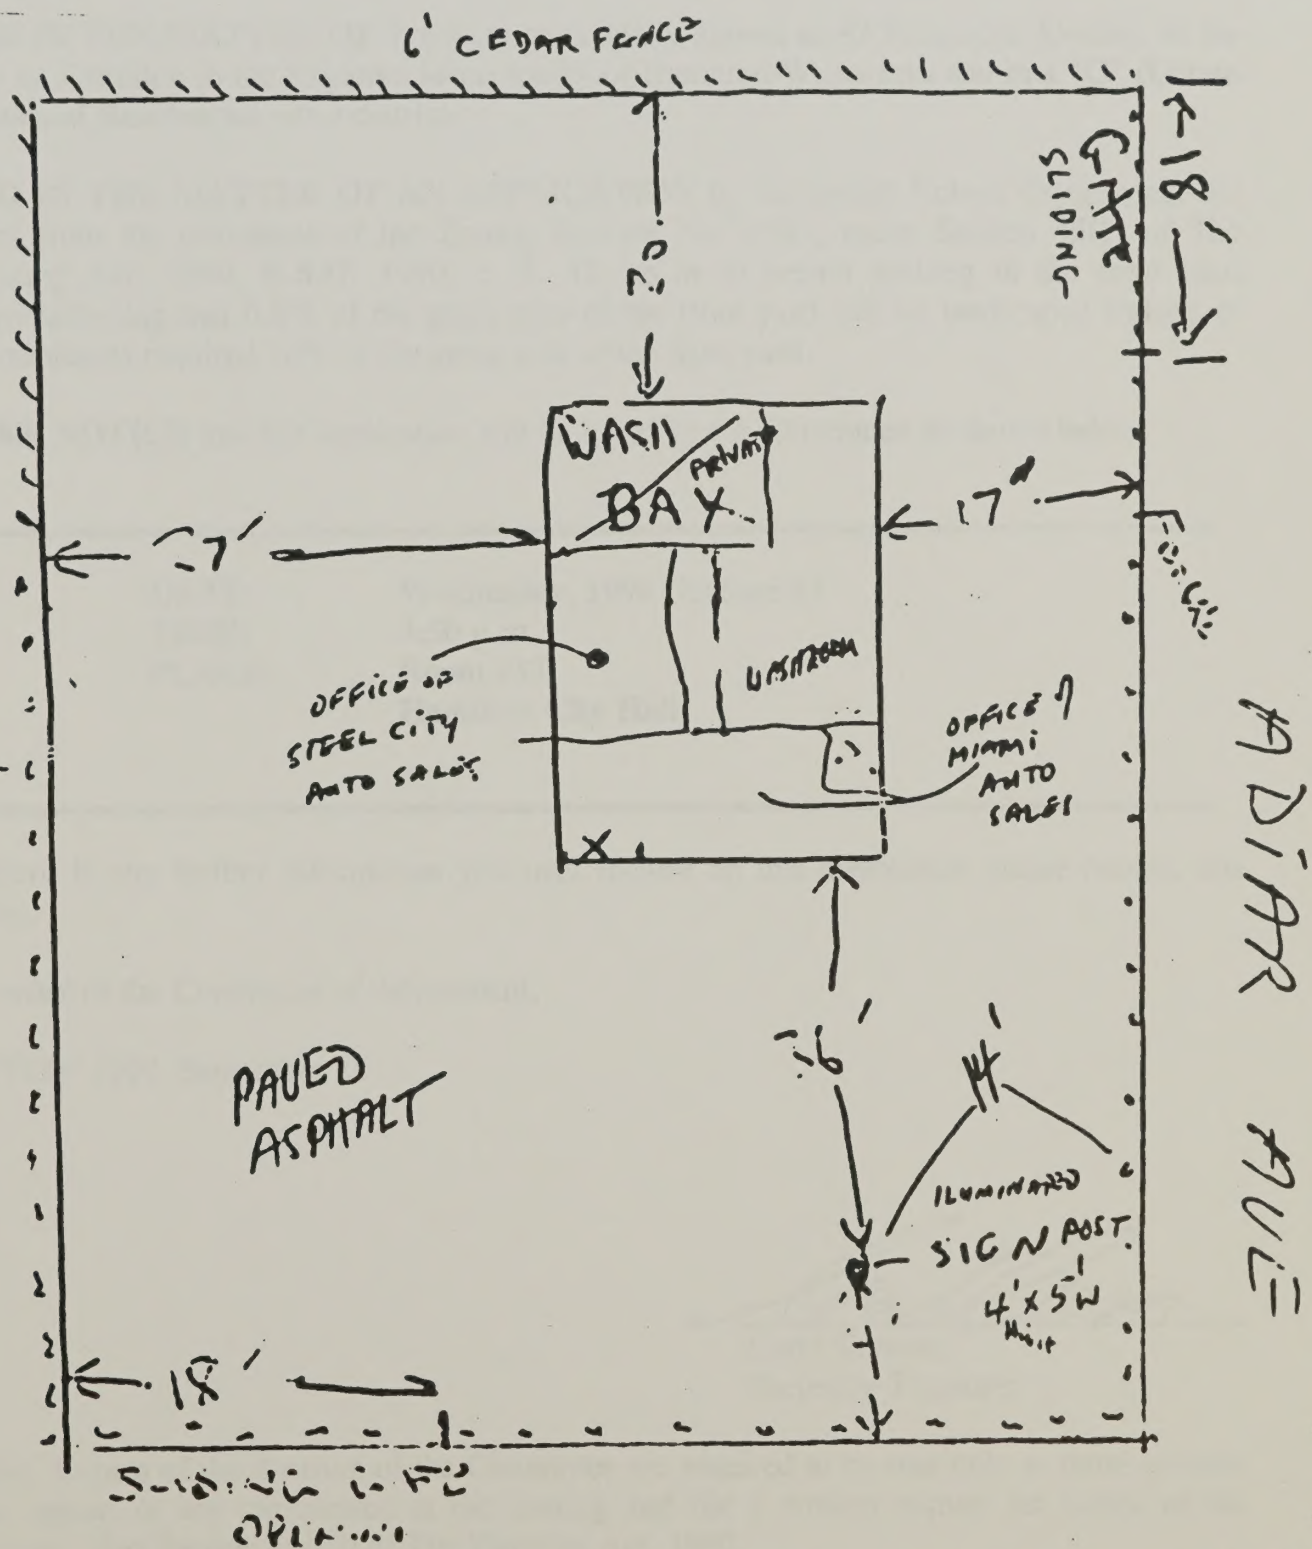

The eighth step is the preparation of the calibration curve.

The ninth step is the preparation of the calibration curve.

The tenth step is the preparation of the calibration curve. This is done by plotting the absorbance of the standard solutions against their concentration.

The eleventh step is the preparation of the calibration curve. This is done by plotting the absorbance of the standard solutions against their concentration.

APPLICATION NO. A-99:217

IN THE MATTER OF The Planning Act, 1990 and of the Zoning By-Law No. 6593, of the City of Hamilton, Section(s) 9.(1) and 19B Schedule S-1361

AND IN THE MATTER OF Premises municipally known as 42 North Oval, in the City of Hamilton in the Regional Municipality of Hamilton-Wentworth and in a "C" (Urban Protected Residential, etc.) district;

AND IN THE MATTER OF AN APPLICATION by the owners Leslie and Andre Normandin, for relief from the provisions of the Zoning By-Law No. 6593, under Section 45(1) of The Planning Act, 1990, R.S.O. 1990, c. P. 13, so as to permit a proposed one storey addition with basement at the rear of the existing single family dwelling notwithstanding that an increase in the gross floor area of 61.8 sq. m. (658.56 sq. ft.) for a new gross floor area of 209.54 sq. m. (2255.54 sq. ft.) or 75.2% of the lot area will be provided instead of the maximum permitted 125.42 sq. m. (1350.0 sq. ft.) or 45% of the lot area.

NOTE: This new application is necessary due to an error on the original application. The area of the basement was inadvertently left out when calculating the total gross floor area of the dwelling. The resultant error increases the gross floor area by approximately 329.18 sq. ft., thus providing a new gross floor area of 2,255.54 sq. ft. or 75.2% of the lot area instead of the 63.62% of the lot area as approved under application A-99:173.

LECTURE 10

THEORY OF THE ATOM

1. The atom is a small, dense, positively charged sphere of radius a . The charge is distributed uniformly throughout the volume of the sphere. The total charge is Q .

2. The electric field E is zero for $r > a$. For $r < a$, the electric field is given by $E = \frac{Qr}{4\pi\epsilon_0 a^3}$.

3. The potential V is zero for $r > a$. For $r < a$, the potential is given by $V = \frac{Q}{4\pi\epsilon_0 a} \left(\frac{3}{2} - \frac{r^2}{2a^2} \right)$.

4. The electric field E is zero for $r > a$. For $r < a$, the electric field is given by $E = \frac{Qr}{4\pi\epsilon_0 a^3}$.

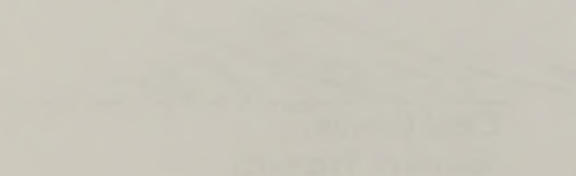

$$\begin{aligned} E &= \frac{Qr}{4\pi\epsilon_0 a^3} \\ V &= \frac{Q}{4\pi\epsilon_0 a} \left(\frac{3}{2} - \frac{r^2}{2a^2} \right) \end{aligned}$$

EXPERIMENTAL PROCEDURE

1. PREPARATION OF THE SAMPLE

1.1. Weighing and Grinding

Approx. 0.5 g of sample

The sample was weighed on a balance and ground to a fine powder in a mortar and pestle.

The powder was then transferred to a vial and sealed for storage.

The sample was then subjected to a series of tests to determine its properties. The first test was a visual inspection of the powder, which appeared as a fine, white, crystalline solid. The second test was a measurement of the powder's density, which was found to be 1.2 g/cm³. The third test was a measurement of the powder's melting point, which was found to be 150°C.

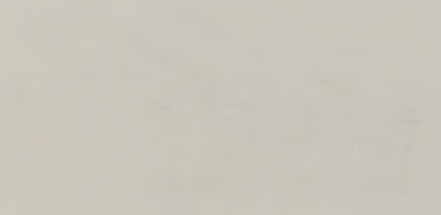

The results of these tests are summarized in the table below.

Property	Value
Density (g/cm ³)	1.2
Melting Point (°C)	150
Appearance	White, crystalline solid

The sample was then subjected to a series of tests to determine its properties.

The results of these tests are summarized in the table below.

The sample was then subjected to a series of tests to determine its properties.

The graph shows the relationship between temperature and the property. The property increases with temperature up to 100°C, after which it decreases.

The results of these tests are summarized in the table below.

EXPERIMENT 1: THE EFFECT OF TEMPERATURE ON THE RATE OF A CHEMICAL REACTION

OBJECTIVE

To determine the effect of temperature on the rate of a chemical reaction.

THEORY

The rate of a chemical reaction is defined as the change in concentration of a reactant or product per unit time.

For a reaction, the rate is given by:

Rate = $-\frac{1}{a} \frac{d[A]}{dt}$ or $+\frac{1}{b} \frac{d[B]}{dt}$

where $[A]$ and $[B]$ are the concentrations of reactant and product respectively, and a and b are the stoichiometric coefficients.

The rate of a reaction is affected by several factors, including temperature, concentration, and catalyst.

In this experiment, the effect of temperature on the rate of a reaction will be studied.

The reaction to be studied is the reaction between hydrogen peroxide and potassium iodide.

Reaction	$2H_2O_2(aq) \rightarrow 2H_2O(l) + O_2(g)$
Reactants	$H_2O_2(aq)$ and $KI(aq)$
Products	$H_2O(l)$ and $O_2(g)$

The rate of the reaction will be determined by measuring the volume of oxygen gas evolved over a fixed period of time.

The experiment will be carried out at three different temperatures: 20°C, 30°C, and 40°C.

The results of the experiment will be discussed in the next section.

The following table shows the results of the experiment.

From the graph, it can be seen that the rate of reaction increases with temperature. This is because the molecules have more kinetic energy at higher temperatures, leading to more frequent and more energetic collisions, which increases the rate of reaction.

The experiment has shown that the rate of a chemical reaction is affected by temperature. The rate increases as the temperature increases.

CHAPTER 10

THEORY OF THE EARTH

10.1. THE EARTH'S CRUST

10.1.1. THE CRUST

The crust is the outermost layer of the Earth, which is composed of solid rock. It is the layer on which we live and on which all the other layers of the Earth are built.

The crust is divided into two main parts: the continental crust and the oceanic crust. The continental crust is thicker and is composed of lighter rocks, while the oceanic crust is thinner and is composed of heavier rocks.

The thickness of the crust varies from about 5 km under the oceans to about 70 km under the continents. The composition of the crust also varies, with the oceanic crust being more mafic (rich in magnesium and iron) than the continental crust, which is more felsic (rich in feldspar and silica).

The crust is not a uniform layer, but it is made up of many different types of rocks and minerals.

The crust is the part of the Earth that we can see and touch. It is the part of the Earth that is exposed to the atmosphere and the hydrosphere.

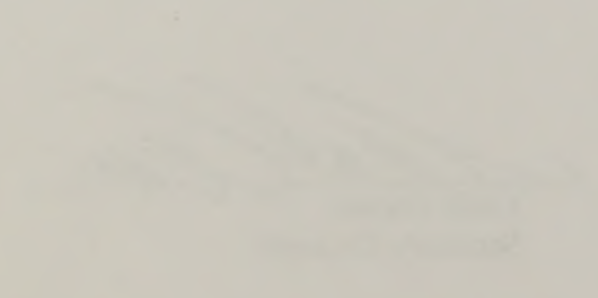

Continental crust	5-70 km
Oceanic crust	5-10 km
Average thickness	17 km

EXPERIMENT 10

MECHANICAL WORK

ABSTRACT

1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this experiment is to determine the work done by a force in moving an object through a distance.

The work done by a force is defined as the product of the force and the distance through which the force acts.

The work done by a force is a scalar quantity and is measured in joules (J).

The work done by a force is zero if the force is perpendicular to the displacement.

The work done by a force is positive if the force and the displacement are in the same direction.

The work done by a force is negative if the force and the displacement are in opposite directions.

The work done by a force is zero if the force is zero or the displacement is zero.

The work done by a force is a measure of the energy transferred to or from an object.

The work done by a force is a measure of the change in kinetic energy of an object.

The work done by a force is a measure of the change in potential energy of an object.

Force (N)	Distance (m)	Work (J)
1.0	1.0	1.0
2.0	1.0	2.0
3.0	1.0	3.0
4.0	1.0	4.0
5.0	1.0	5.0
